

An infestation of Uruguayan primrose-willow in California's Colusa National Wildlife Refuge.
Photo courtesy of Brenda Grewell, Exotic and Invasive Weeds Research Unit of the USDA Agricultural Research Service, University of California, Davis.

Large-flower primrose-willow has a colorful yellow flower and produces small, bright-red fruit.
Photo courtesy of Karan A. Rawlins, University of Georgia, Bugwood.org.

Creeping water primrose at Lake Hennessey, Napa California Photo courtesy of Brenda Grewell, Exotic and Invasive Weeds Research Unit of the USDA Agricultural Research Service, University of California, Davis.